

A detailed black and white engraving of a large sack of grain, likely wheat or barley, with a smaller sack or bundle of grain resting on top of it. The grain is spilling out from the bottom of the larger sack. The image is highly textured with fine lines and cross-hatching, giving it a woodcut or engraving appearance. The composition is centered, with the grain sacks occupying most of the frame. The background is plain white, making the dark, textured grain stand out. The overall style is reminiscent of 19th-century agricultural illustrations.
